

Officers read to Club Fed kids

Updated 9:32 pm, Wednesday, April 15, 2015

Albany County Sheriff Craig Apple reads to a pre-K class during an Club Fed Child Care Center's "Our Family Reads!" project event at the Leo O'Brien Federal Building Wednesday, April 15, 2015, in Albany, N.Y.

ALBANY — Law enforcement leaders in uniform read to young children on Wednesday at Club Fed's "Our Family Reads!" project supporting family literacy.

Club Fed is the day care center at the Leo O'Brien Federal Building.

This week is designated the Week of the Young Child.

Connor Hagzan, center, begins to cry as acting Chief Brendan Cox of the Albany Police Dept. reads to toddlers during an Club Fed Child Care Center's "Our Family Reads!" project event at the Leo O'Brien Federal Building Wednesday, April 15, 2015, in Albany, N.Y.

Acting Chief Brendan Cox of the Albany Police Dept. reads to toddlers during an Club Fed Child Care Center's "Our Family Reads!" project event at the Leo O'Brien Federal Building Wednesday, April 15, 2015, in Albany, N.Y.

Albany County Sheriff Craig Apple reads to a pre-K class during an Club Fed Child Care Center's "Our Family Reads!" project event at the Leo O'Brien Federal Building Wednesday, April 15, 2015, in Albany, N.Y.

Albany County Sheriff's investigator Tracy Mance lets NaQuien Lewis try on her uniform hat during an Club Fed Child Care Center's "Our Family Reads!" project event at the Leo O'Brien Federal Building Wednesday, April 15, 2015, in Albany, N.Y.